11 Fed. R. Civ. P. 65 1

1 Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65, Plaintiffs American Encore, Karen 2 Glennon, and America First Policy Institute (“AFPI”) (collectively, “Plaintiffs”) 3 respectfully move for a preliminary injunction prohibiting implementation and 4 enforcement of the 2023 Elections Procedures Manual’s (“EPM” or “2023 EPM”) Vote
5 Nullification Provision. See 2023 EPM Ch. 13, § II(B)(2), p. 252.

6 INTRODUCTION

7 The Vote Nullification Provision challenged here is one of the most aggressive—8 and unusual—disenfranchisement laws in the United States. To Plaintiffs’ knowledge, not 9 even a single sister state has adopted anything close to it.

10 Under the Vote Nullification Provision, a tiny number of governmental actors can 11 effect mass disenfranchisement. If a majority of a county board of supervisors fails or 12 refuses to certify election results, the votes of each and every one of the voters in that 13 County are simply thrown out entirely. The scale of that potential disenfranchisement is 14 unprecedented: for example, through the non- or malfeasance of a mere 3 members of the 15 Maricopa Board of Supervisors, all 2.4 million active registered voters in that county could 16 be disenfranchised: roughly an 800,000-to-1 ratio.

17 Unsurprisingly, such sweeping disenfranchisement of faultless voters does not 18 comport with the Constitution. Under the Supreme Court’s Anderson-Burdick framework, 19 the Vote Nullification Provision is subject to strict scrutiny because it imposes a severe 20 burden on the right to vote—indeed, the severest possible: total disenfranchisement. And 21 the provision flunks strict scrutiny because it is not narrowly tailored: there are multiple 22 other alternatives to ensuring certification of election results that do not rely on wholesale 23 disenfranchisement of all voters in an entire county.

24 This Court should therefore issue a preliminary injunction against enforcement of 25 the Vote Nullification Provision.

26 LEGAL STANDARD

27 In general, a party seeking a preliminary injunction must demonstrate that “(1) he is 28 likely to succeed on the merits of his claim, (2) he is likely to suffer irreparable harm absent

1 the preliminary injunction, (3) the balance of equities tips in his favor, and (4) a preliminary 2 injunction is in the public interest.” Baird v. Bonta, 81 F.4th 1036, 1040 (9th Cir. 2023) 3 (citing Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008)). When, as here, “the 4 nonmovant is the government, the last two Winter factors ““merge.”” Id. (citation omitted).

5 “The first factor ‘is a threshold inquiry and is the most important factor.’” Id.
 6 (quoting Env’t Prot. Info. Ctr. v. Carlson, 968 F.3d 985, 989 (9th Cir. 2020)). And “[i]t is 7 well-established that the first factor is especially important when a plaintiff alleges a 8 constitutional violation and injury.” Id. Consequently, “[i]f a plaintiff in such a case shows 9 he is likely to prevail on the merits, that showing usually demonstrates he is suffering 10 irreparable harm no matter how brief the violation.” Id. Additionally, such a plaintiff’s 11 “likelihood of succeeding on the merits also tips the public interest sharply in his favor 12 because it is ‘always in the public interest to prevent the violation of a party’s constitutional 13 rights.’” Id. (citation omitted).

14 BACKGROUND¹

15 In Arizona, the officer in charge of elections for each county—usually a county 16 recorder—is responsible for tabulating votes, and sending those unofficial county election 17 returns to their respective county board of supervisors. See generally A.R.S. §§ 16-621, 18 16-622, 16-624. In turn, the county boards are tasked with conducting an official canvas, 19 declaring results, and certifying those results. See generally A.R.S. §§ 11-251(3), 16-642, 20 16-645, 16-646(C), 16-647. The Secretary then uses those official certifications from 21 county boards to certify the results for the statewide elections. See generally A.R.S. §§
 22 16-642(A)(3), 16-643; 16-645, 16-648. In recent elections, this process has been somewhat 23 turbulent.

24 For example, following the 2022 general election, the Cochise County Board of 25 Supervisors refused to certify the election results for Cochise County for a period of time, 26 resulting in a delay of the Secretary’s certification. See Declaration of Brennan A.R. Bowen

27
 28 ¹ The facts of this case are also detailed in Plaintiffs’ Preliminary Injunction Motion regarding the Speech Striction, (ECF. No. 14), and are incorporated herein by reference.

1 (attached hereto as Ex. A), at ¶ 3, Attachment 1. Eventually, the Cochise County Board 2 certified the results, as did the Secretary. Id. at ¶ 4, Attachment 2.

3 Since then, the Arizona Attorney General has indicted two of the Cochise County 4 Supervisors for their role in delaying the certification. Id. at ¶ 5, Attachment 3. Those 5 prosecutions are ongoing. Id. at ¶ 6, Attachment 4.

6 Likely responding to these events in 2022, the 2023 EPM now includes two 7 provisions regarding canvassing elections results that are almost certainly aimed at 8 addressing the issues that arose in 2022 with Cochise County: (1) the EPM imposes on 9 County Boards of Supervisors “a nondiscretionary duty to canvass the returns as provided 10 by the County Recorder or other officer in charge of elections” and removes from the 11 County Boards any “authority to change vote totals, reject the election results, or delay 12 certifying results without express statutory authority or court order,” EPM Chp. XII, 13 § 2(A)(2); and (2) the EPM also imposes a similar non-discretionary canvassing duty on 14 the Secretary, but also provides that “[i]f the official canvass of any county has not been 15 received by [the] deadline, the Secretary of State must proceed with the state canvass 16 without including the votes of the missing county,” EPM Chp. 13, § II(B)(2) (emphasis 17 added); see also 2019 EPM, (attached hereto as Ex. E), at pp. 243 (containing no 18 requirement to throw out the votes for an entire county if that county’s Board of 19 Supervisors fails to timely canvas and certify election results).

20 Only the second mandate, the Vote Nullification Provision, is challenged here. In 21 effect, that provision mandates that all votes cast by all voters in a county will not be 22 counted whatsoever if the Board of Supervisors for that county fails or refuses to certify 23 the canvas election results for that county.

24 Accordingly, where a county Board of Supervisors refuses or fails to certify election 25 results by the applicable deadline, the Vote Nullification Provision mandates the complete 26 disenfranchisement of every voter in that county. It does so even where the voters in that 27 county have complied with all requirements for exercising their constitutional right to vote 28 (e.g., voting before polls close, presenting identification for in-person voting or signing

1 their mail-in ballot etc.). That disenfranchisement extends to every single vote cast by the 2 voter from Presidential Electors all the way down to whether to retain a justice of the peace.

3 Fearing that the Secretary will act on this provision and disenfranchise numerous 4 voters—including Plaintiffs and their members—Plaintiffs sent the Secretary a letter on 5 June 18, 2024, asking the Secretary to disavow enforcement of the Vote Nullification
 6 Provision. See Reinforcement Letter (attached hereto as Ex. B). The Secretary Responded 7 on July 31, 2024, essentially talking right passed the Plaintiffs’ concerns, and asserting that 8 “the Secretary cannot and will not” “disavow this nondiscretionary statutory duty.” See 9 Secretary’s Response Letter (attached hereto as Ex. C), at 2. The Secretary thus appears to 10 believe that he has a statutory duty to disenfranchise voters if a county is dilatory in 11 canvassing and certifying elections results. See generally id.

12 ARGUMENT

13 I. PLAINTIFFS HAVE STANDING TO CHALLENGE THE VOTE NULLIFICATION 14 PROVISION

15 Plaintiffs here have Article III standing to challenge the Vote Nullification Provision 16 both because (1) it inflicts current and ongoing injury and (2) Plaintiffs face a credible 17 threat of enforcement—i.e., complete disenfranchisement—under that provision.

18 A. The Vote Nullification Provision Is Inflicting Current And Ongoing Injury

19 Here Plaintiffs have standing because the Vote Nullification Provision inflicts
 20 current and ongoing injury upon voters, including Ms. Glennon and thousands of AFPI’s 21 members. It does so by changing the nature of their right to vote—including the right to 22 have their votes counted—from an unqualified right to one subject to potential 23 disqualification by the actions of governmental officials. By downgrading voters’ right to 24 vote, the Vote Nullification Provision inflicts current and ongoing injury that establishes 25 Plaintiffs’ standing here. See Complaint, at ¶¶ 19–21, 29; see also Rumsfeld v. FAIR, 547 26 U.S. 47, 52 n.2 (2006) (“[T]he presence of one party with standing is sufficient to satisfy 27 Article III’s case-or-controversy requirement.”).

28 Without the Vote Nullification Provision, voters have an essentially absolute right

1 to vote—and have those votes counted—so long as they comply with applicable rules. For 2 example, before the 2023 EPM, so long as in-person voters showed voter identification, 3 followed ballot instructions, and cast a ballot by poll-close time, their right to have that 4 vote counted was unconditional. Similarly, mail-in voters that signed their ballot affidavit, 5 followed ballot instructions, and ensured receipt of their ballots by the close of polls, had 6 a vested right to have their vote counted that cannot be taken away by a governmental 7 official.

8 In sum, before the 2023 EPM, no elected official in Arizona could disenfranchise 9 voters and refuse to count their votes. Voters that followed applicable procedures had an 10 unconditional right to have their vote counted that could not be obstructed by any elected 11 official.

12 The Vote Nullification Provision changes all of that. Now, through misfeasance or 13 failure to assemble a quorum, all votes in Arizona are subject to potential nullification if 14 the applicable county Board of Supervisors fails or refuses to certify election results. See 15 EPM at 252. Indeed, the Vote Nullification Provision ensures those voters’ votes will not 16 be counted by creating a non-discretionary mandate for the Secretary to throw out all such 17 affected votes. Id. (“[T]he Secretary of State must proceed with the state canvass without 18 including the votes of the missing county[.]” (emphasis added)).

19 By downgrading voters’ right to vote from (1) an unqualified right as long as 20 applicable rules are followed to (2) a conditional right, subject to potential disqualification 21 by the actions of elected officials, the Vote Nullification Provision inflicts cognizable 22 injury that establishes Article III standing now. Put differently, the Plaintiffs need not wait 23 for their vote to be disqualified to be harmed because they are harmed by the present 24 downgrading of their unqualified right to vote to a conditional right to vote.

25 Indeed, the harm at issue here is akin to the harm inflicted by felony-26 disenfranchisement laws. In those cases, a would-be voter who is convicted of a felony is 27 not permitted to vote, but may be allowed to do so based on whether a Governor decides 28 to restore his voting rights. Such felony disenfranchisement laws similarly downgrade

1 citizens' right to vote from unqualified to conditional based on the actions (or inaction) of 2 a government official (specifically, the condition being a favorable exercise of discretion 3 by the relevant Executive).

4 Federal courts have held that voters suffering such injury have standing to challenge 5 those felony disenfranchisement laws based on that harm: degrading the right to vote by 6 making it subject to the actions of governmental officials. For example, in Williams v.
7 Taylor, the Fifth Circuit considered a challenge to Mississippi's felony disenfranchisement 8 statute, which disqualified convicted felons from voting unless the governor granted relief 9 through a pardon. 677 F.2d 510 (5th Cir. 1982). There, the Fifth Circuit held that the 10 plaintiff lacked standing to challenge the pardon procedure, because he had not "tried to 11 procure a pardon from the governor." Id. at 517-18. But, as to the felony 12 disenfranchisement law that relegated the plaintiffs' previously unqualified right to vote 13 into one conditional on actions by governmental officials, the Fifth Circuit reached those 14 claims on the merits—considering Article III standing to be so obvious that it need not be 15 analyzed (as it was for the pardon procedure challenge). Id. at 514-17.

16 Similarly, the Eastern District of Virginia recognized an equivalent basis for 17 standing in El-Amin v. McDonnell, No. 3:12-cv-00538-JAG, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40461 18 (E.D. Va. Mar. 22, 2013). As in Williams v. Texas, the devaluation of El-Amin's right to 19 vote to one conditional on how governmental officials exercised their authority accorded 20 standing to challenge the felony disenfranchisement statute effecting that downgrade. See 21 id. at *15 ("While El-Amin is correct that Virginia has deprived him of his voting rights, 22 this injury permits him only to challenge the deprivation itself, which he does in Count I.").

23 Here, Plaintiffs have standing on the same essential basis: the downgrading of their 24 right to vote from unconditional to conditional, based on how governmental officials act.
25 Ms. Glennon's right to vote is directly affected in this manner, thereby establishing Article 26 III standing. (See ECF No. 13-4, at ¶¶1-4) (providing that Ms. Glennan resides in Arizona 27 and is registered to vote and intends to vote in Arizona). And AFPI has over 2,600 active 28 members—the majority of whom are registered voters—who are widely distributed

1 throughout the State and reside in all 15 of Arizona’s counties. See Catharine Cypher
 2 Declaration (attached hereto as Ex. D), at ¶¶ 8–9. It therefore has representational standing 3 based on the injury to its affected members. See, e.g., Hunt v. Wash. State Apple Advert.
 4 Comm’n, 432 U.S. 333, 342 (1977).

5 Plaintiffs also have standing based on precedent involving signature-mismatch 6 cases. These cases involve election officials who have employed procedures that create a 7 risk of wrongfully disqualifying votes based on putative (but erroneous) signature 8 mismatches. Federal courts have broadly held that plaintiffs have Article III standing to 9 challenge such potential wrongful vote disqualifications where state election officials fail
 10 to provide adequate cure opportunities. See, e.g., Democratic Exec. Comm. v. Detzner, 347 11 F. Supp. 3d 1017, 1024-25 (N.D. Fla. 2018) aff’d 915 F.3d 1312 (11th Cir. 2019); Martin
 12 v. Kemp, 341 F. Supp. 3d 1326, 1333-35 (N.D. Ga. 2018); Frederick v. Lawson, 481 F.
 13 Supp. 3d 774, 786-90 (S.D. Ind. 2020); see also Ariz. Democratic Party v. Hobbs, 485 F.
 14 Supp. 3d 1073, 1085-87 (D. Ariz. 2020) rev’d on other grounds 18 F.4th 1179, 1193 (9th 15 Cir. 2021) (same for failure to provide opportunity to cure missing signatures post-16 election).

17 Here, Plaintiffs similarly challenge a provision that potentially subjects their votes 18 to potential disqualification based on the wrongful actions of governmental officials—i.e., 19 refusing or failing to certify election results.

20 Finally, Plaintiffs here have Article III standing under the principles underlying First 21 Amendment permit cases, where the right to free speech is downgraded by making it 22 subject to actions of governmental officials as to whether they approve a permit. The Ninth 23 Circuit has recognized that the institution of such permit requirements—which relegate the 24 right to free speech to one dependent on how governmental officials act—creates 25 cognizable injury that supplies standing to challenge those permit requirements. See, e.g., 26 Taniguchi v. Schultz, 303 F.3d 950, 957 (9th Cir. 2002) (Ninth Circuit precedents recognize 27 that plaintiffs “have standing to challenge a permit requirement, even though they did not 28 apply for permits, because applying for a permit would have been futile” (cleaned up));

1 Stewart v. San Francisco, No. 22-16018, 2023 U.S. App. LEXIS 3811, at *2 n.3 (9th Cir.
 2 Feb. 17, 2023) (recognizing Article III standing to challenge statute that “establishe[d] a 3 permit requirement in advance of public speech and ban[ne]d an instrumentality of speech 4 absent a permit.”) (citation omitted)).

5 B. Plaintiffs Face A Credible Threat Of Enforcement of the Challenged
 6 Provision

7 Plaintiffs also have Article III standing because they face a credible threat of 8 enforcement of the Vote Nullification Provision against them and their members. That 9 provision imposes a non-discretionary mandate that the Secretary shall not count any vote 10 of a county without certified results. See EPM at 252 (“If the official canvass of any county
 11 has not been received by this deadline, the Secretary of State must proceed with the state 12 canvass without including the votes of the missing county.” (emphasis added)). So, if a 13 county fails or refuses to certify its election results, it is all-but certain that the Vote 14 Nullification Provision will be enforced to disenfranchise voters.

15 The threat of enforcement is further demonstrated by the Secretary’s refusal to 16 disavow enforcement of the Vote Nullification Provision. Plaintiffs’ counsel sent the 17 Secretary a letter on July 18, requesting that he disavow enforcement of the provision by 18 COB on July 26. Ex. B. Secretary Fontes responded after that deadline and refused to 19 disavow enforcement, stating that “the Secretary cannot and will not” “disavow this 20 nondiscretionary statutory duty” to canvas election results. Ex. C, at 2. Read in context 21 with Plaintiffs’ specific request that the Secretary disavow enforcement of the Vote 22 Nullification Provision, the Secretary’s response cannot be understood as anything other 23 than a refusal to disavow such enforcement. Compare Ex. B, with Ex. C. Despite the 24 Secretary’s circumlocution, the Secretary’s intent to enforce that challenged provision is 25 clear.

26 A credible threat of enforcement thus exists here as “the state’s refusal to disavow 27 enforcement of [the challenged law] against [plaintiffs] during this litigation is strong 28 evidence that the state intends to enforce the law and that [plaintiffs’] members face a

1 credible threat.” California Trucking Ass’n v. Bonta, 996 F.3d 644, 653 (9th Cir. 2021); 2 see also Susan B. Anthony List v. Driehaus, 573 U.S. 149, 165 (2014) (finding credible 3 threat of future enforcement where “respondents have not disavowed enforcement if 4 petitioners make similar statements in the future”).

5 The risk of potential disenfranchisement under the Vote Nullification Provision is 6 further demonstrated by the dispute in Cochise County in 2022, in which the county board 7 of supervisors did refuse to certify the results, provoking an electoral crisis. See supra at 8 2–3. Indeed, that standoff ironically is almost certainly the motivation behind the 9 Secretary’s creation of the Vote Nullification Provision. That the Secretary did so indicates 10 his own view that the risk of recurrence of a non-certification incident is material. So too 11 does the Attorney General’s criminal prosecution of the Cochise County supervisors that 12 refused to certify results, see supra at 3, demonstrating her evident view that future 13 deterrence is necessary to address the risk of recurrence.

14 Notably, even the risk of potential disenfranchisement is enough to support Article 15 III standing to bring an Anderson-Burdick challenge. See, e.g., Democratic Exec. Comm.
 16 of Fla. v. Lee, 915 F.3d 1312, 1319 (11th Cir. 2019) (recognizing cognizable injury under 17 Anderson-Burdick doctrine because a statute “subjects vote-by-mail and provisional 18 electors to the risk of disenfranchisement” (emphasis added)). That risk is manifest here—
 19 particularly given the actions of Cochise County in 2022, the Secretary’s refusal to disavow
 20 enforcement of the Vote Nullification Provision in 2024, and the Attorney General’s 21 criminal prosecution of Cochise supervisors to attempt to deter future certification refusals.

22 II. THE VOTE NULLIFICATION PROVISION IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL UNDER THE 23 ANDERSON-BURDICK DOCTRINE

24 The Vote Nullification Provision is an unconstitutionally severe burden on the right
 25 to vote under the Supreme Court’s Anderson-Burdick doctrine. Because it inflicts outright 26 disenfranchisement on voters—who are faultless—by the actions of third parties, it inflicts 27 a severe burden that triggers strict scrutiny. And the Vote Nullification Provision fails 28 under strict scrutiny because it is not narrowly tailored—particularly as multiple, obvious

1 alternatives to outright disenfranchisement are available to address issues of non-2 certification of election results.

3 A. Overview of the Anderson-Burdick Doctrine

4 Challenges to electoral statutes and regulations that allege an unconstitutional 5 burden are governed by the Anderson-Burdick framework. That doctrine creates “a sliding 6 scale test, where the more severe the burden, the more compelling the state’s interest must 7 be, such that ‘a state may justify election regulations imposing a lesser burden by 8 demonstrating the state has important regulatory interests.’” Ariz. Green Party v. Reagan, 9 838 F.3d 983, 988 (9th Cir. 2016) (citation omitted).

10 Under the Anderson-Burdick framework, “an election regulation that imposes a 11 severe burden is subject to strict scrutiny.” Nader v. Brewer, 531 F.3d 1028, 1035 (9th Cir.
 12 2008). In contrast, “[l]esser burdens trigger less exacting review, and a State’s important 13 regulatory interests will usually be enough to justify reasonable, nondiscriminatory 14 restrictions.” Angle v. Miller, 673 F.3d 1122, 1132 (9th Cir. 2012) (quoting Prete, 438 15 F.3d at 961) (cleaned up).

16 B. The Vote Nullification Provision Imposes a Severe Burden on the Right to 17 Vote

18 The Vote Nullification Provision imposes a severe burden on the right to vote—19 indeed the severest possible burden: total disenfranchisement. And it does so not based on 20 any fault of the disenfranchised voters, but instead due to the actions of third-party officials 21 over whom the voters have no control. Cf. Arizona Democratic Party v. Hobbs, 18 F.4th 22 1179, 1188 (9th Cir. 2021) (holding that burden was minimal where it was the product of 23 voters’ “own negligence only”).

24 In the context of voting rights, “the basic truth [is] that even one disenfranchised 25 voter—let alone several thousand—is too many[.]” League of Women Voters of N.C. v.
 26 North Carolina, 769 F.3d 224, 244 (4th Cir. 2014). For that reason, “disenfranchising 27 thousands of eligible voters ... amount[s] to a severe burden on the right to vote.” Florida 28 Democratic Party v. Detzner, No. 16-cv-607, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 143620, at *18 (N.D.

1 Fla. Oct. 16, 2016); see also Stewart v. Blackwell, 444 F.3d 843, 869 (6th Cir. 2006) 2 vacated as moot 473 F.3d 692 (6th Cir. 2007) (holding that burden was “severe” where 3 unreliable systems resulted in thousands of votes not being counted). Here, however, the 4 number of voters that could be disenfranchised is in the millions. Indeed, under the Vote
 5 Nullification Provision, any three members of the Maricopa Board of Supervisors 6 collectively possess the ability to disenfranchise all 2.4 million registered active voters in 7 the county. See Northeast Ohio Coal. v. Husted, 696 F.3d 580, 593 (6th Cir. 2012)
 8 (affirming holding that policy that disqualified approximately 0.248% of ballots imposed 9 a “substantial burden on provisional voters”); Lee, 915 F.3d at 1319-22 (holding that 10 signature verification policy that affected “only about 4,000 ballots ... [i.e.,] less than 5 11 hundredths of a percent of the more than 9 million total ballots cast” imposed “at least a 12 serious burden on the right to vote”).

13 The burden here is particularly severe because the potential vote disqualification is 14 not the product of any fault of the voter and instead the product of actions by third parties.
 15 “It is one thing to fault a voter if she fails to follow instructions.... But it is quite another 16 to blame a voter when she may have done nothing wrong[.]” Lee, 915 F.3d at 1324–25; 17 accord id. at 1321 (holding that failure to provide an opportunity to cure a signature 18 mismatch imposed “at least a serious burden on the right to vote”). But the Vote 19 Nullification Provision is just that “quite another” thing that the Lee Court cautioned 20 against: throwing out votes even where the voters themselves “have done nothing wrong.”
 21 Id. at 1325. By doing so, it imposes a severe burden on the right to vote.

22 C. The Vote Nullification Provision Is Not Narrowly Tailored

23 Even assuming that the Vote Nullification Provision was supported by a compelling 24 state interest (an issue on which Defendants have the burden of proof), it fails strict scrutiny 25 because it is not narrowly tailored. Indeed, there are multiple, obvious alternatives to mass 26 disenfranchisement for the State to achieve its objectives. To the extent that complete 27 disenfranchisement en masse is ever permitted, it could only be as a last resort rather than 28 the first. But the Vote Nullification Provision rejects multiple alternatives and reaches first

1 for the cudgel of disenfranchisement to “motivate” recalcitrant supervisors. In doing so,
 2 the Vote Nullification Provision is not narrowly tailored and thus unconstitutional. See,
 3 e.g., Boos v. Barry, 485 U.S. 312, 329 (1988) (holding that a regulation was “not narrowly 4 tailored [because] a less restrictive alternative [wa]s readily available”); Nader v. Brewer, 5 531 F.3d 1028, 1035-38 (9th Cir. 2008) (holding that residency requirement for petition 6 circulators was not narrowly tailored because more tailored alternative of “requiring 7 petition circulators to agree to submit to jurisdiction for purposes of subpoena 8 enforcement” was available).

9 At least five alternatives are readily available that could be employed to deter county 10 malfeasance while enfranchising voters, rather than resorting to disenfranchising faultless 11 voters.

12 First, the Secretary could certify the unofficial vote count provided by the county 13 recorders. See supra at 2 (explaining how county recorders are responsible for tabulating 14 votes and sending those unofficial county election returns to their respective county board 15 of supervisors). Put simply, the Secretary could cut out the middle-man (the county board) 16 and certify the returns from the county recorder. This would not require disenfranchising a 17 single voter in the offending county.

18 Second, the Secretary could seek to mandamus a county Board of Supervisors that 19 failed to perform its non-discretionary duty to canvas. In Arizona, county Boards of 20 Supervisors have a non-discretionary duty to canvass the primary and general elections
 21 within a specific timeframe after those elections. A.R.S. § 16-642(A)(1)(a)–(b). The EPM 22 further provides expressly that “[t]he Board of Supervisors has a non-discretionary duty to 23 canvass the returns.” EPM at 248.

24 Mandamus actions and special actions (which are essentially the codified procedure 25 for seeking mandamus) exist to compel government officials to perform their non-26 discretionary duties. See Arizonans for Second Chances, Rehab., & Pub. Safety v. Hobbs, 27 249 Ariz. 396, 404 ¶ 16 (2020) (explaining that “[a]n action is in the nature of mandamus 28 if it seeks to compel a public official to perform a non-discretionary duty imposed by law,”

1 and that Special Action “Rule 3(a) ‘sets forth the traditional functions of the writ of 2 mandamus’” (citations omitted)). And such actions are not only available for election
 3 related duties, but are commonplace for them. See, e.g., id. (considering a mandamus action 4 in the election context); Arizona Pub. Integrity All. v. Fontes, 250 Ariz. 58, 62 ¶¶ 11–12, 5 64–65 ¶ 27 (2020) (granting mandamus relief against then-Recorder Fontes for violation 6 of the EPM and Arizona statutes). Therefore, the Secretary already has a narrowly tailored 7 way to compel a county board to perform its duty—mandamus the offending board.

8 Third, the Secretary could seek for a court to resolve any dispute over vote counts.
 9 He could thus file an action against the Board of Supervisors at issue and seek a declaratory 10 judgment from the court as to the correct election results. This too would have been more 11 narrowly tailored than the Vote Nullification Provision’s disenfranchisement of the voters 12 of an entire county.

13 Fourth, and relatedly, a court could provide for the appointment of an auditor or 14 special master to certify the vote totals for a county that fails to do so. Such a mechanism 15 is used in similar election contexts. For example, when a hand-count audit results in an 16 expanded audit that encompasses all precincts in a given county, Arizona law requires that 17 a superior court appoint a “special master to review the computer software” for the 18 tabulations machines in that county. See A.R.S. § 16-602(J). The appointment of a special 19 master would be yet another more narrowly tailored way to remedy the actions of a rogue 20 county.

21 Fifth, the Secretary could refer an offending Board of Supervisors to the Attorney 22 General for prosecution, or the Attorney General could initiate prosecution herself.
 23 Violations of the EPM are a class 2 misdemeanor. A.R.S. § 16-452(C). And Boards of 24 Supervisors are required by the EPM, at pp. 247–49—and statute, A.R.S. § 16-642(A)(1)— 25 to canvass election results within a certain time after an election. See also A.R.S. § 16-1010 26 (“A person charged with performance of any duty under any law relating to elections who 27 knowingly refuses to perform such duty, or who, in his official capacity, knowingly acts in 28 violation of any provision of such law, is guilty of a class 6 felony unless a different

1 punishment for such act or omission is prescribed by law.”).

2 Moreover, the Secretary may make criminal referrals for any board (or board 3 member) that fails to fulfill this duty, and the Attorney General has authority to prosecute 4 the same. See A.R.S. § 16-1021. Indeed, the Attorney General is currently prosecuting 5 members of the Cochise County Board of Supervisors for their failure (or delay) in 6 canvassing elections results. See supra at 2–3. Once again, criminal prosecution of bad-7 faith actors would be more narrowly tailored than the Vote Nullification Provision because 8 it would not involve disenfranchising a single voter.

9 The Vote Nullification Provision’s remedy is thus wildly disproportionate to the 10 problem it attempts to solve and gratuitous in its resort to disenfranchisement to “cure” the 11 problem. That disproportionality and gratuitousness is particularly apparent when it is 12 compared to the non-disenfranchising alternatives available to the Secretary, which are 13 both numerous and obvious.

14 Additionally, the lack of narrow tailoring is evident from the perverse incentives 15 that the Vote Nullification Provision creates. Take, for example, a self-interested county 16 Board of Supervisors where all supervisors just lost their respective reelection bids. Such 17 a board members could refuse to canvass the election that they just lost, thereby compelling 18 the Secretary to canvass the official election results without that county. The result? Those 19 board seats would remain technically vacant because no winner was declared, and the 20 malfeasant board would appoint someone to fill the vacant seats. And who better to fill 21 those vacant seats than the current board members? In short, the Vote Nullification 22 provision allows a Board of Supervisors to operate in perpetuity, regardless of elections 23 results.

24 Likewise, a Board of Supervisors could thwart not just a county-level election, but 25 a national one. Assume that the 2024 Presidential Election came down to winning Arizona.
26 Assume further that Vice President Harris won Arizona and, thereby, the Presidency. In 27 such a scenario, the Maricopa County Board of Supervisors could refuse to canvass the 28 election result for Maricopa—where a large portion of Arizona’s Democrat voters live and

1 vote. With Maricopa voters' voters nullified, Arizona could flip from blue to red, and 2 former President Trump wins the state and, consequently, the Presidency. All this requires 3 is a quorum of politically enterprising supervisors, and the current mandatory operation of 4 the Vote Nullification Provision.

5 Or take a more morbid scenario, involving harm to election officials by extreme 6 factions to achieve their political ends. The recent assassination attempt on former 7 President Trump illustrates the dangers here. Notably, the complete disenfranchisement of 8 all 2.4 million registered active voters in Maricopa County can be accomplished through 9 elimination by kidnapping (or more fatal means) of just three members of the Maricopa 10 Board of Supervisors.

11 By ensuring that unlawful actions against supervisors will be effective in 12 disenfranchising voters as long as they successfully eliminate a quorum necessary to certify 13 election results, the Vote Nullification Provision is not narrowly tailored to serve its 14 putative ends. Instead, it actively thwarts those ends.

15 III. THE REMAINING REQUIREMENTS FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF ARE SATISFIED

16 A. Plaintiffs Are Likely To Suffer Irreparable Harm Absent An Injunction

17 As set forth above, the Vote Nullification Provision is inflicting current and ongoing 18 injury by unconstitutionally degrading the right to vote of Plaintiffs and their members.
 19 Supra §I.C. That alone establishes irreparable harm. See, e.g., Touchston v. McDermott, 20 234 F.3d 1133, 1158–59 (11th Cir. 2000) (“[B]y finding an abridgement to the voters’ 21 constitutional right to vote, irreparable harm is presumed and no further showing of injury 22 need be made.”); Obama for Am. v. Husted, 697 F.3d 423, 436 (6th Cir. 2012) (“A 23 restriction on the fundamental right to vote therefore constitutes irreparable injury.”).

24 More generally, it is “well established that the deprivation of constitutional rights 25 ‘unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury.’” Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 26 (9th Cir. 2012) (citation omitted). Indeed, “[c]ourts routinely deem restrictions on 27 fundamental voting rights irreparable injury.” League of Women Voters of N.C. v. North 28 Carolina, 769 F.3d 224, 247 (4th Cir. 2014). An injunction here would thus prevent 1 irreparable harm to Plaintiffs’ constitutional rights.

2 B. The Balance of Harms and Public Interest Support Injunctive Relief

3 Because the defendants are governmental officials, the final two Winter factors 4 merge here. Baird, 81 F.4th at 1040. And both support this request. See id. at 1042 (“A 5 plaintiff’s likelihood of success on the merits of a constitutional claim also tips the merged 6 third and fourth factors decisively in his favor.”).

7 As a general matter, “[t]he public interest and the balance of equities favor 8 prevent[ing] the violation of a party’s constitutional rights.” Ariz. Dream Act Coal. v.
9 Brewer, 855 F.3d 957, 978 (9th Cir. 2017) (quoting Melendres, 695 F.3d at 1002). This is 10 particularly so where voting rights are at issue because “[t]he public has a ‘strong interest 11 in exercising the fundamental right to vote.’” League of Women Voters of N.C., 769 F.3d
12 at 248 (quoting Purcell v. Gonzalez, 549 U.S. 1, 4 (2006)). The potential mass 13 disenfranchisement that the Vote Nullification Provision threatens to effectuate is thus not 14 in the public interest, but an injunction against that outcome is.

CONCLUSION

The Court should grant a preliminary injunction prohibiting Defendants from implementing or enforcing the Vote Nullification Provision and directing them to promulgate an updated EPM that eliminates the constitutional infirmities.
